What is Turnitin?

Turnitin is one of the online assessment platforms at UCL. Although its origins are in helping to identify plagiarism, in recent years it has diversified into marking and feedback.

Turnitin can be:

- Online submission of work.
- Feedback on work (this is linked from MyFeedback (see your Moodle home page).
- An Originality Report - how your work matches other texts, including web pages, journal articles, books and other students' work. This can help you with quoting, paraphrasing and referencing, and avoiding unintentional plagiarism.
- Peer assessment exercises using the Peermark tool.

You may not experience all of these uses of Turnitin - what you see depends on the settings chosen by staff on your course.

A word about plagiarism

- All Turnitin does is find matches - so it cannot tell whether or not a piece of work is plagiarised. However, a high Similarity score can highlight where you need to work on your academic writing.
- Although Turnitin has a large database of sources, it may not find every match of text that occurs on the web and in books and journals - so Turnitin may not be the only tool used by UCL to check for plagiarism and difficulties with academic writing.
- If you want to, you can obtain a confidential Originality Report on your draft work by submitting it to the Turnitin assignment at UCL’s Plagiarism and Academic Writing Moodle space.
- For further information see UCL’s plagiarism guidelines.
- Elsewhere in our guidance for students we explain in more detail what the Turnitin Similarity score means.

Your work on Turnitin

Turnitin must adhere to UK Data Protection law. Using Turnitin depends on your consent for your personal data to be held on Turnitin's server, and for your work to be stored in the Turnitin database for checking against the work of future students. By submitting via Turnitin, you give this consent.

Students can access information about plagiarism and submit work to Turnitin confidentially, at the Plagiarism and Academic Writing Moodle course.

See our FAQs about Turnitin at UCL.
