

3Four

Sì is 'four'.

And this time there are four characters, not three as usual.

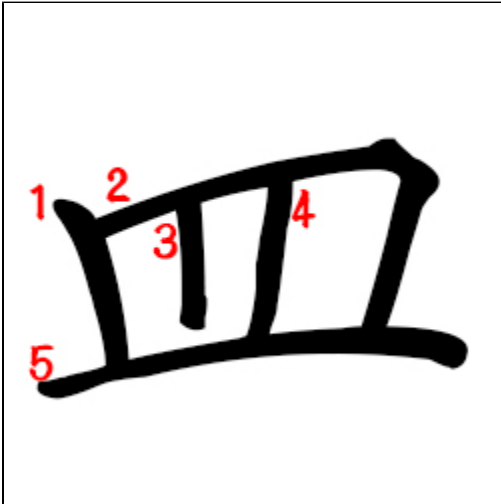

is regarded as inauspicious (bùjǐli) as it sounds like s 'death'.

Add three drops of water and you still have sì, but this one is used in place names like Sishu:

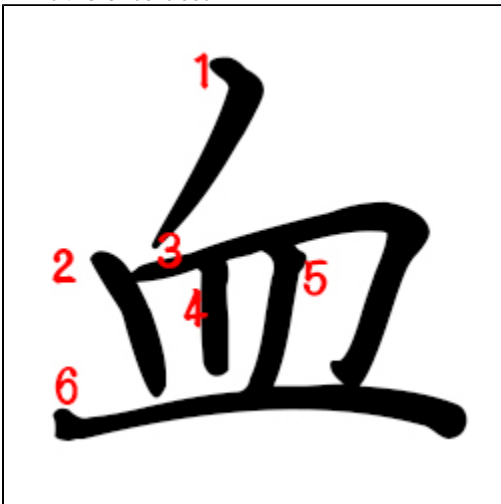

Now we have two look alikes:

1. This is mn 'dish':

Note that the two internal strokes don't bend and the bottom stroke sticks out on both sides.
Commonish word: qimn 'household utensils'

2. And this is xuè 'blood':

Common word: xuèyè 'blood'
In form similar to 1. but with that extra stroke at the top; perhaps it's blood flowing out of a dish!
